

Associate (m/w/x) in Management Consulting

Locations: Munich, Hamburg, London, Shanghai, Detroit

Your tasks

As an Associate at Strategy Engineers you will take on the different challenges a management consultant faces in technology-driven industries such as the automotive sector. From day one, you are responsible for your own work packages based on your existing expertise and develop it further. You are working directly with and for our customers.

Within the scope of your work package, you support our customers independently in the development and implementation of strategic and operational solutions in close alignment with the operative project manager.

You are leading a small client or consultant team and you will be responsible for guiding and developing younger colleagues.

Your benefits

- » We actively involve you in the shaping of our consulting services and give you the opportunity to work independently
- » You benefit from our specific trainings to develop your skills
- » We offer an individual mentoring program and a distinctive feedback culture to optimally promote and support your career
- » Entrepreneurship is very important to us, therefore you will be actively involved in the further development of our company
- » Mobile working policy

Your profile

- » At least three years of relevant professional experience in management consulting or technology-driven industry, alternatively a completed doctorate and first relevant professional experience
- » Excellent university degree in a STEM subject at a renowned university
- » Fascination for technology and strategic questions going beyond the actual product itself
- » Strong entrepreneurial thinking and acting
- » Excellent analytical skills
- » Team player, good communication skills, empathy, flexibility, enthusiasm and the willingness to take responsibility

Who we are

Strategy Engineers is a management consultancy specialized in transformation, digitization and product portfolios. Hereby, our focus is on technology-driven industries, with special emphasis on the automotive industry. We are convinced that our consulting approach is unique: Our management expertise and entrepreneurial competence, combined with technical understanding, sets us apart from other consultancies. It allows us to meet the challenges on eye-to-eye level with our clients. This enables us to develop tailor-made solutions that bring tangible and sustainable change.
